Koehl is a German, and, his wife says, comes from a family of suicides, both his father and brother having attempted their own lives. For six months he has conducted a butcher shop at 33 Miller avenue. Of late he has become despondent over the loss of trade, and the depression caused by the great sirke seemed to be the last straw.

This morning he went to market early and returned with some meat, but not with his usual quantity, the increase in price supposedly being the cause. Soon after he went upstairs to the sitting-room, where his wife sat, with their little baby. He had a butcher knife in his land. She asked him what he was going to do, but got no reply.

The detective went to Sutherland and found that the stud answered the description of the one stolen from Cohen. Sutherland said he had purchased the stud for $50 from a strangeman. He at once surrendered it to the police.

Cohen and Moran were sent for, and this morning Moran visited Police Head-quarters. The stud was placed with some other diamonds on the Sergeant's desk. Moran was unable to identify it. Fakirs and Swindlers Swoop Down on West Brighton To-Day.

Declare They Will Open as of Yore To-Morrow.

CONEY ISLAND, July 7.- The hotelkeepers and other legitimate business men here are greatly stirred up over the resurrection of all the swindling games, which will be running in full blast to-morrow unless Police Sergt. Clayton causes the fakirs to be arrested.

More than fifty fakirs who operate windling games with their queer paraphernalla came down on the first train this morning, and were soon at work the Bowery and along the beach. Visia real old-time John Y. McKane Sunday here. Such thieving games as the "spin-"hammer," "plate," "money-box"

"Will you open shop to-morrow?" was asked of a sleek spindle operator on the Bowery this morning.

"Will I?" he exclaimed, apparently greatly surprised, "well I guess I will. Don't you think I waited long enough? The season is about half over now, but all I want is two good Sundays and I'll be satisfied to quit, and you can bet I'll be a good winner, too."

"Are you not afraid the police will interfere?" queried the reporter.

"The police interfere! What bosh!

"Are you not afraid the police will interfere?" queried the reporter.
"The police interfere! What bosh!
That's all fixed," he coolly replied. "You don't think for a moment that this guy would open shop unless he got the tip that everything was all right? You see, a man who lets out stands to us at a high rental went and saw the Captain and asked him to close his eyes to the games for a few days, and it would bring some money to the business people here.

The Fourth of July there was a big crowd here, and a few of us opened up our stands just as a feeler, and we did a good business. There were no squeals, and we got the tip to continue on until we were ordered to close. To morrow we will go shead, but will have to be extra careful.

If the fakirs are allowed to work their games the concert-hall keepers will slso take a chance and walk over the tegal boundary line a few steps.

In many of these get-money-quick amusement places large quantities of "igi" wine were carried in to-day and placed in the ice-box for to-morrow's rush. "Gig" wine is an American wine a very poor imitation of champagne, which costs the concert hall keepers 17 conts a quart bottle and sells for 16 to any party or parties who are being entertained by the soubrettes in the green rooms.

tertained by the soubrettes in the green rooms.

During the McKane administration hundreds of dollars' worth of this false champagne was sold for the genuine in the concert halls on the Bowery, and if the purchaser attempted to make any kind of "kick" he generally got a sound thrashing from the bouncers and was then arrested for creating a disturbance, and fined file next morning for disorderly conduct.

Fourth of July the aged soubrettes, in their abbreviated skirts, were permitted to leave the stage and drink at tables with men in the audience. There will probably be a repetition of this to-morrow, as the concert-hall keepers and their performers are about desperate on account of the poor business this season.
